TRIED AND TESTED

Caribbean parents abroad face a consistent daily challenge — getting their children to and from school when their own work schedule does not align with school hours. The school run service fills this gap with a community solution. A trusted Caribbean professional who knows the families, speaks the same cultural language, and treats every child like their own community member is worth far more to a Caribbean parent than any anonymous app.

CHAPTER ONE

The Business Model and the Legal Requirements

1 How the money works

$15–$25 per child per run. A morning run with 5 children is $75–$125 for 45–90 minutes of driving. Same children in the afternoon is another $75–$125. Monday to Friday, 4 weeks per month: $3,000–$5,000/month from 5 families. Adding a second route with a second driver doubles it.

2 Legal requirements — non-negotiable

Every region has specific requirements for transporting children for compensation. You must research and comply with your specific location before taking a single paid booking. Standard requirements in most US states, UK, and Canada include: Enhanced background check (DBS in UK, FBI fingerprint in US) · Commercial vehicle insurance (not standard car insurance — costs $100–$300/month more but is legally required) · Child seat compliance for appropriate ages · Local council or state licensing in some regions. Present your compliance documentation to every parent before they book. It is your primary trust signal.

CHAPTER TWO

Building Trust in the Caribbean Community

1 WhatsApp is your booking system

Caribbean parents operate on WhatsApp. A simple WhatsApp group for your school run clients — daily confirmation of pickup time, weather updates, any schedule changes — is more trusted and more valued than any app. It is personal. It is direct. And it signals that you are part of their community, not a service they hired off the internet.

2 The community trust positioning

'Our Children. Our Community. Our Future.' That is the message on the School Run Service Blueprint cover for a reason. A Caribbean parent in London or Toronto or New York who sends their child with you every morning is not buying a transport service. They are trusting you with their most valuable person. Build everything around that trust — punctuality above all else, consistent communication, and treating every child with the same care you would want for your own.

CHAPTER THREE

Growing Your Route and Adding Drivers

1 Expanding to a second route

Once your first route is full (5–8 children consistently), identify a second reliable Caribbean professional in the community who wants to operate their own school run route under your system. You provide the structure, the client relationships, and the community trust. They provide the vehicle and the driving. Split the revenue 60/40 or 70/30 in their favour for their time.

2 The school holiday and after-school programme angle

Caribbean families need childcare coverage during school holidays, half-term breaks, and after-school activity transportation. A school run operator who also offers holiday cover — driving children to activities, waiting, and bringing them home — commands $25–$40 per hour and fills the income gap when school is not running.

BUILD YOUR BUSINESS WEBSITE – PERSONAL NOTE

While all the steps in this guide work to get your first clients through community outreach, A simple booking page for school run enquiries — where parents submit their child's school, pickup address, and schedule — streamlines your onboarding and gives parents a professional first impression before they trust you with their children. I found it significantly easier to use Lovable — an AI site builder where you describe what you want and it builds a clean professional site in minutes. No coding. Check it out.
