· 3 drivers: $15,000–$25,000/month gross · Caribbean community accounts: highest retention rate

The Delivery Business Opportunity

Platforms as your launch pad. Your own route as your destination.

DoorDash, Amazon Flex, Uber Eats, and Instacart generated over $150 billion in delivery revenue collectively. The platforms provide the technology, the brand recognition, and the customer base. They also take 20–30% of every order. Your strategy is to use the platforms to generate immediate income while simultaneously building direct client relationships that pay you without the platform taking its cut. The platform is your bridge. Your own route is your destination.

$3,000–$6,000/mo

Solo driver net income · Platform income + direct client route · Caribbean community accounts highest retention

Why Now Is the Right Moment

Caribbean restaurants, Caribbean caterers, and Caribbean food businesses in diaspora cities are doing substantial delivery volume through platforms — and paying 20–30% to those platforms on every order. When a trusted Caribbean delivery professional offers to handle their overflow deliveries directly at 15% — the math is immediate and the conversation is easy. You are not competing with DoorDash. You are offering an alternative to a cost they are already paying.

What the platform gives you

Immediate income. No client acquisition. Established customer base. Flexible hours. Insurance coverage during active deliveries. A way to start earning this week without building anything.

What owning your route gives you

100% of the delivery fee. Direct relationships with businesses that need reliable drivers. Recurring weekly income from accounts that call you first. A business, not a gig.

CARIBBEAN EARNER PRINCIPLE

Trinidad and Tobago produces more energy per capita than almost any country in the world — built on discipline to develop existing resources fully. Develop your first delivery route fully before expanding to a second.

Platform Launch Strategy

Which platforms to start with, how to qualify, and how to maximize earnings.

The platform phase is your training ground and your income bridge. Use it to learn delivery logistics, identify high-demand areas, and build your reputation — while saving capital to invest in your direct client route.

1	Amazon Flex — The Highest Consistent Pay $18–$25/hour for block delivery routes. Amazon Flex routes are block-scheduled — you claim a 3–4 hour block and pick up a batch of packages from the warehouse. Consistent hours, predictable income, and you are building familiarity with residential delivery routes in Caribbean neighborhoods.
2	DoorDash and Uber Eats — The Flexibility Play Food delivery with flexible scheduling. Peak hours — Friday and Saturday evenings, Sunday lunch — generate $20–$30/hour in Caribbean neighborhoods where order volumes are high. Use these platforms to identify which Caribbean restaurants are doing the highest delivery volume. Those are your direct client targets.
3	Instacart — The Premium Grocery Play Instacart shoppers in Caribbean neighborhoods fill carts with Caribbean products from Caribbean grocery stores. Building a reputation as a reliable, careful shopper in specific stores generates tip income that significantly boosts hourly earnings. Caribbean grocery store managers who see you regularly are natural referral sources for direct client relationships.
4	Maximizing Platform Earnings Before Going Direct Log peak hours in your city for 4 weeks. Identify the 3–5 restaurants generating the most orders during your delivery times. Note which ones decline orders or have long wait times — these are businesses whose delivery volume exceeds their platform capacity. These become your first direct client conversations.

Building Your Direct Client Route

The transition from platform dependency to owning your delivery relationships.

A direct client pays you 12–15% of order value instead of the platform's 20–30%. For a Caribbean restaurant doing $5,000/week in delivery orders, switching just 30% of that volume to direct delivery saves them $375–$750/week — and pays you $600–$750/week without the platform's algorithm determining when and whether you get work.

1	The Direct Client Pitch 'I have been delivering for you through DoorDash and I have noticed your order volume is consistently high. I would like to offer you dedicated direct delivery service at 15% of order value — less than DoorDash, with a dedicated driver who knows your restaurant and your neighborhood.' That pitch converts.
2	Your Direct Delivery Agreement A one-page agreement covering: delivery zones you cover, your fee structure (percentage of order value or flat per-delivery rate), delivery hours, payment terms (weekly net-7), and your insurance coverage. Stripe or Venmo handles payment. The agreement is simple. The relationship is recurring.
3	Building a Route of 5 Direct Clients Five Caribbean restaurants each sending you 15 deliveries per week at $8–$12 average delivery fee = $600–$900/week in direct delivery income. At zero platform cut. Five clients generating consistent weekly income from a single geographic route with minimal drive time between pickups.
4	Adding Grocery and Meal Prep Delivery Caribbean meal prep services and grocery delivery are high-growth segments in diaspora cities. Caribbean families who want home-cooked Caribbean meals without cooking them subscribe to Caribbean meal prep services that need reliable weekly delivery. $15–$25 per delivery. Recurring. Predictable. High retention.

Caribbean Community Clients — Your Warmest Accounts

Caribbean restaurants, caterers, and businesses that trust you first.

Caribbean business owners in diaspora cities have been paying platform fees for years without ever having a Caribbean delivery professional approach them about a better arrangement. The cultural trust you bring to that conversation is worth more than any platform algorithm.

1Caribbean Restaurants — Your Volume Accounts

Caribbean restaurants in diaspora cities do their highest delivery volume on Friday evenings, Saturday lunch, and Sunday. A dedicated delivery driver who knows the menu, speaks the language, and shows up reliably every weekend is worth paying 3–5% less than DoorDash for. Approach the owner directly after a busy weekend service.

2Caribbean Caterers — Event Delivery

Caribbean caterers delivering to events need drivers they trust to handle large orders carefully and arrive on time. Event catering delivery pays $50–$150 per delivery for a single trip — not per item. One Caribbean caterer doing four events per weekend = $200–$600 from one client per week.

3Caribbean Grocery Stores and Importers

Caribbean grocery stores stocking authentic Caribbean products need reliable delivery for customers who place large orders. Store-specific delivery relationships — where you are the store's dedicated driver for local delivery — generate consistent weekly income with predictable loads.

4Caribbean Meal Prep and Home Cooks

The Caribbean meal prep market in diaspora cities is growing rapidly. Home cooks and small meal prep businesses that do not have delivery infrastructure pay $15–$25 per delivery for weekly subscription drops to their regular customers. Building a route of 10 meal prep clients each with 8–10 weekly customers = 80–100 deliveries per week from one category.

CARIBBEAN EARNER PRINCIPLE

Barbados built the Caribbean's highest literacy rate through a culture that treated learning as the foundation of everything else. Know your delivery zone, your clients, and your cost structure before you scale.

Vehicles, Equipment and Insurance

What you need, what it costs, and how to structure it for maximum margin.

Item	Purpose	Cost
Insulated delivery bags (2–3)	Hot food temperature maintenance	$40–$80
Phone mount and charger	Navigation and platform apps	$20–$40
Cargo van (rent or own)	Large order and catering delivery	$60–$80/day rental OR $800–$1,500/mo own
Commercial auto insurance	Required for delivery business	$150–$400/month
Thermal box for ice cream/frozen	Premium grocery delivery add-on	$30–$60
Business registration (LLC)	Protect personal assets	$100–$500 one-time

INSURANCE—THE NON-NEGOTIABLE

Personal auto insurance does not cover commercial delivery activity. If you are involved in an accident while doing paid delivery work under personal insurance, your claim can be denied. Commercial auto insurance for delivery: $150–$400/month depending on vehicle and coverage. Amazon Flex and DoorDash provide some coverage during active deliveries — but not during the gap between deliveries. A commercial policy covers the full operating period. Get it before your first direct client delivery.

Scaling to a Multi-Driver Operation

From solo driver to delivery business with employed or contracted drivers.

The delivery business scales by adding drivers under your business. You hold the client relationships. Your drivers handle the routes. You earn the margin between what clients pay your business and what you pay your drivers. At five drivers each doing $3,000/month in deliveries for your business at a 20% margin, your passive income from driver operations is $3,000/month before your own driving.

Stage	Drivers	Monthly Revenue	Your Net Income
Solo platform	1 (you)	$3,000–$6,000	$3,000–$6,000
Solo + direct clients	1 (you)	$5,000–$9,000	$5,000–$9,000
2 drivers — 1 direct + 1 contractor	2	$8,000–$14,000	$6,000–$10,000
5 drivers — mixed routes	5	$18,000–$30,000	$10,000–$18,000

Own Your Route. Keep the Revenue.

The platforms gave you the customers. Your direct client relationships give you the income. The Caribbean community gives you the warm market. The only step between you and your first direct delivery contract is the conversation you have not had yet.
