CHAPTER ONE

The Delivery Business Opportunity — Own the Route, Keep the Revenue

Platforms as your launch pad. Your own route as your destination.

DoorDash, Amazon Flex, Uber Eats, and Instacart generated over $150 billion in delivery revenue in 2025. They kept 15–30% of every order as commission. The drivers who built direct relationships with restaurants and businesses on the side — charging flat weekly rates and keeping 100% — quietly out-earned the platform workers by margins that never appear in the salary statistics. This guide teaches you to use the platforms as your immediate income bridge while building the direct Caribbean community delivery route that pays you without anyone taking a cut.

1

Platform rates versus direct rates

DoorDash pays $2–$10 per delivery plus tips. At $6 average with 3 deliveries per hour you earn $18/hour before fuel, maintenance, and self-employment tax. A direct contract with a Caribbean ghost kitchen paying $500/month for daily dinner deliveries is $120/hour of effective value for a 90-minute daily route. Same vehicle. Same fuel. No platform commission.

Your vehicle requirements — what you actually need

Standard car or SUV — minimum requirement for DoorDash, UberEats, Instacart. Must be 2005 or newer for most platforms. Clean driving record, background check, proof of insurance. For larger cargo delivery (Amazon Flex XL, Roadie): SUV, minivan, or cargo van. Commercial auto insurance is required for any vehicle used for paid delivery — personal insurance policies explicitly exclude commercial use. Budget $100–$200/month additional for commercial rider coverage.

CHAPTER TWO

Building Your Caribbean Community Delivery Route

Your warmest clients are already in your community.

The Caribbean community delivery route is the most underserved delivery niche in every diaspora city. Caribbean ghost kitchens need reliable delivery that does not cost them 30% per order. Caribbean elderly community members need weekly grocery delivery from someone they trust. Caribbean-owned businesses need same-day courier runs that no platform covers efficiently. You serve all three from the same vehicle on the same routes.

1 Caribbean ghost kitchen partnerships

Every ghost kitchen in your city is paying DoorDash 15–30% on every order. A direct delivery partnership at a flat weekly rate saves them money and pays you more. Pitch: 'I offer direct delivery for Caribbean food businesses — flat weekly rate, no per-order commission, reliable daily service.' A ghost kitchen doing 50 orders per day at $12 average is paying DoorDash $3,000–$5,400 per month in commission. Your flat rate of $800/month saves them $2,000–$4,400 and pays you without the platform.

2 Caribbean elderly grocery delivery

Caribbean elderly community members — the grandmothers, the retired professionals, the community elders — need weekly grocery delivery from someone they trust. Charge $25–$40 per delivery. Weekly recurring. The same 15 clients, the same shopping list, the same Saturday morning route. That is $375–$600 per Saturday from clients who never cancel because you have become part of their weekly routine.

CHAPTER THREE

Pricing, Contracts, and Scaling to a Fleet

Direct contracts. Recurring income. Hired drivers when volume demands it.

The delivery business scales exactly like every other remote operator model — you build the client relationships, the pricing systems, and the route logic, then hire drivers to execute while you manage the operation.

1 Direct contract pricing structure

Ghost kitchen daily delivery (90 min route): $400–$800/month flat · Business courier runs (3x weekly): $300–$500/month · Elderly grocery delivery (weekly, 15 clients): $375–$600/week · Medical and pharmacy delivery (urgent, premium): $15–$35 per delivery · Total from direct clients: $2,000–$5,000/month depending on volume and mix

2 Hiring your first driver

When your direct route exceeds what one person can manage, post on TaskRabbit, Craigslist, or Caribbean community groups: 'Delivery driver needed — Caribbean community route, reliable vehicle required, $18–$22/hour, flexible schedule.' You dispatch, they drive. You manage the client relationships and collect the margin. One hired driver doubles your capacity without doubling your time.

YOUR BUSINESS WEBSITE — PERSONAL NOTE

A simple booking page for your delivery service — where Caribbean restaurants and businesses can schedule recurring pickups and deliveries without the back-and-forth — positions you as a professional logistics partner, not a gig worker. I found it significantly easier to use Lovable — an AI site builder where you describe what you want and it builds a professional site in minutes. No coding. Check it out.

CARIBBEAN EARNER PRINCIPLE

Trinidad's Carnival culture built one of the world's most complex logistics operations from the ground up — floats, costumes, food, sound systems, all coordinated by Caribbean people who showed up and made it work. Your delivery route is your logistics operation. Build it right and it runs itself.
