REAL SKILLS. REAL INCOME. NO HYPE.

This guide was built for Caribbean children abroad who are serious about building real income with real work. No fluff. No theory. Just the steps that work.

Why Caribbean Food Is Your Built-In Business Advantage

The diaspora is hungry for home. You already know how to cook it.

Caribbean food is not just food to the diaspora community. It is connection. It is memory. It is Saturday afternoon at your grandmother's table. A Caribbean kid who can cook jerk chicken, rice and peas, curry, roti, callaloo, or oxtail can sell out at every community event they attend — because the Caribbean community abroad will always pay for a taste of home made properly.

1 What you can sell

Packaged meals for collection or delivery · Plates at community events, church fairs, and cultural festivals · Weekly meal prep for Caribbean families too busy to cook · Holiday meal packages for Christmas, Easter, and Carnival · Baked goods and Caribbean pastries — patties, coconut bread, black cake

2 The numbers

A 2-container meal plate at $12-$15 x 50 plates at a community event = $600-$750 in one afternoon. Weekly meal prep for 10 families at $80-$100/week = $800-$1,000 recurring weekly income. Holiday packages at $50-$150 each sell out every year.

YOUNG BOSS TRUTH

Cook It. Package It. Sell It. The Caribbean community abroad is your ready-made market. You just need to show up with the food.

CHAPTER TWO

Food Safety, Permits, and Working From a Proper Kitchen

You must do this right from day one.

Before you sell a single plate, you need to understand the food safety requirements in your area. This is not optional and is not something to figure out later. Getting this right from the start protects you, your customers, and your business.

1 What you need to start legally

Food handler's permit or certificate — typically a 1-day course costing $15–$50. Required in most US states, Canadian provinces, and UK local authorities. Search your local council or health department website.

Approved kitchen — most areas require food sold for profit to be made in an inspected commercial kitchen, not a home kitchen. The next chapter covers how to access one cheaply.

2 Caribbean community organizations as kitchen partners

Churches, community centres, school cafeterias, and Caribbean cultural organizations often have commercial kitchens that sit unused on weekdays and weekends. Many will rent kitchen time for $15–$30 per hour or in exchange for a percentage of sales at community events. Start by approaching Caribbean organisations in your area and asking about kitchen access.

YOUNG BOSS TRUTH

Document everything — food costs, sales, expenses, and receipts. From your first sale you are running a business. Treat it like one.

Pricing, Packaging and Finding Your First Customers

Caribbean food sells itself. Your job is to be visible.

The hardest part of a Caribbean food business is not the cooking — it is building the visibility and the consistent customer base. Here is exactly how to do it.

1 Pricing your food

Individual meal plate (2 containers): $12–$18 · Weekly meal prep (5 meals): $65–$100 · Holiday meal package: $50–$150 · Event catering (per person): $15–$25 · Always price to cover ingredients, kitchen rental, packaging, and your time — then add profit on top

2 Finding customers

Caribbean Facebook groups and WhatsApp communities are your first market. Post a photo of your best dish with a simple message: 'Fresh Caribbean food available for collection or delivery this weekend. Order by Thursday. DM to order.' · Community events, church fairs, and Caribbean cultural festivals for higher volume single-day sales · Instagram for food photography — Caribbean food photographs beautifully and builds following organically

YOUNG BOSS TRUTH

Package your food professionally from day one. Labeled containers with your business name and a simple logo make $12 jerk chicken feel like a $18 restaurant meal. Presentation is half the product.

BUILD YOUR BUSINESS WEBSITE – PERSONAL NOTE

While all the steps in this guide work to get your first clients through community outreach, A simple ordering page where customers can browse your menu, place an order, and pay online removes the back-and-forth of DM ordering and makes your food business feel like a real restaurant before you even have a commercial kitchen. I found it significantly easier to use Lovable — an AI-powered site builder where you describe what you want and it builds a professional site in minutes. No coding. No templates to wrestle with. Check it out for yourself.

CARIBBEAN ISLAND FACT

Jamaica is one of the world's largest producers of ackee — the national fruit. Caribbean food culture runs deep in the diaspora. When you bring authentic Caribbean flavors to your community abroad, you are selling home.
